Your visit is covered at 100% if your provider accepts Medicare. However, during your visit, if you require further tests or screenings other than those listed below, a co-payment co-insurance expense could occur.

A medical and family history review and discussion.

An update to any current providers and prescriptions you may be taking.

Routine measurements such as height, weight, and blood pressure.

Individualized health advice.

Cognitive assessment.

Review of your risk factors and treatment options that may be appropriate for you.

Recommend appropriate preventive services such as: screenings, shots, etc.

Advanced care planning discussion & resources available.

Breast Cancer Screening

Breast cancer is the most common cancer in women.

The best way to test for breast cancer is to have a mammogram, which can help find breast cancer early, even before a lump can be felt.

Early detection means earlier treatment.

Colorectal Cancer Screening

Colorectal cancer is the 4th most common type of cancer in the US.

The earlier it's found, the better the chance of successful treatment. While there are multiple types of screening for colorectal cancer, a colonoscopy remains the gold standard for screening. Some of the other types of screenings include stool tests (FIT, Cologuard), a flexible sigmoidoscopy, and a CT Colonography.

Talk to your medical provider to determine which is best for you.

Lung Cancer Screening

Lung cancer is the 3rd most common cancer in the US.

Low-dose CT scans are used to test those who have a history of smoking, even if there are no symptoms of lung cancer.

As with most cancers, early detection makes for more effective treatment.

Taking Medications Appropriately

If you have chronic medical conditions, it's important to take your medications correctly so that you minimize your risk of complications or worsening of your condition.

Taking medications as prescribed sounds easy enough so why is it a challenge?

Problem 1: Cost.

- The cost of medications can be a significant burden for many people. Often, the cost of medication can create barriers if it is no longer affordable.

Problem 2: Unclear Understanding of Medication Purpose.

- Managing chronic health conditions requires an understanding of the condition, including the role that medication plays in treatment. People who don't understand the role and importance of medications are less likely to take them as prescribed.

Problem 3: Complexity of medication regime.

- As the number and frequency of medications increase, it can become difficult to remember what to take and when to take it.

How can these problems be addressed?

Problem 1: Cost.

- Know your prescription coverage. If you have questions, call your Pharmacy Benefits Manager at Medimpact Customer Care at 877-403-6035. Talk with your provider if certain medications are causing cost issues. There may be lower-cost alternatives that your provider could order. Finally, check savings programs such as GoodRx, SingleCare, or HelpRx to see if these may be options as well.

Problem 2: Understanding Your Care.

- If you can, take someone you trust with you to your doctor's appointments. They can take notes, remind you of what questions you want to ask your provider, and help you keep track of answers.
- Before you make any changes to your medication, talk to your doctor first. Some medications have specific requirements to change or stop them safely.
- Be realistic about what the meds can and can't do for you. Talk to your provider about the goals of the treatments.

Problem 3: Medication Regime Confusion.

- Talk to your provider or pharmacist about your medications to make sure you understand how to take them. If you are having problems remembering to take your medications, try the following:
 - Set an alarm on a watch or phone as a reminder.
 - When you take a medicine, flip the bottle over so you know you've taken it.
 - Keep medications where you can see them.
 - Set up a medication box or see if your pharmacy will pre-package medicine that is taken at the same time.
 - To remember to refill your meds, mark your refill date on a calendar or set up an auto-refill with your pharmacy. Allow at least a week prior to be sure the pharmacy can have it ready when you need it.
